Not illustrated. 1910 Excerpt: .which is passed round the head of the screw with which the bracket carrying the armature is to be fastened to the base--also to the right, and just below the terminal. The electro-magnet is now to be placed across the little base, with its platinum button facing the platinum wire crossing the face of the armature. A strap of leather or thin ebonite is now placed over the centre of the bobbin, when a screw put through each end of the strap will hold the bobbin firmly in its position on the base. A piece of No. 24 copper wire is now cleaned, and one end pushed in between the wires of the electromagnet, at the flush end, whence it is brought up and passed under the flange of the top left-hand terminal, which is then screwed down upon it. One of the ends of the No. 36 wire wrapped round the bobbin is then brought under the left-hand lower terminal, the other end being in like manner connected to the right-hand lower terminal. It is needless to point out that, to ensure good electrical contact, these ends must be bared of their silken covering, and be well cleaned with emery paper, before being screwed up under the shanks of the terminals. Fig. 17 shows the relay; (a) is the electro-magnet, (b) the armature with its bracket, and Fig. 18 A the parts assembled on the base. To make the coherer we take our empty little...
