Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO provided information that it had previously presented in a testimony on the Administration on Aging (AOA) programs and services, focusing on: (1) the match between its missions and resources; (2) how AOA provides technical assistance and oversight to state units on aging; and (3) whether AOA technical assistance meets the needs of state units on aging. GAO found that: (1) as mandated by the Older Americans Act, AOA helps meet the special needs of the elderly by providing them with a wide array of social and nutritional services; (2) the U. S. elderly population has increased by nearly 65 percent since the acts passage in 1965, making the provision of such services increasingly important; (3) to serve the rapidly growing elderly population, AOA has been expanded to provide more programs and services, engage in more extensive federal coordination, and conduct more program evaluation; (4) due to a significant decline in inflation-adjusted program funds, staffing, and travel funds, new programs and mandates are unfunded, key leadership positions are vacant, and AOA monitoring capabilities are in question;...
